WARSHIPS IN LINE

Magnificent Pageant of Battleships of Sampson and Schley in New York Harbor.

THE GREAT GUNS BOOMED

Patriotic Fervor of Multitudes Reached a Climax at Tomb of General Grant—New York Never Before Witnessed Such Scenes.

New York, Aug. 20.—New York and the nation today signified the appreciation of the republic of her victorious fleet. The imposing naval pageant of warships has been received in the harbor of the largest city of the country with acclamations of delight and admiration, and the ovation from the shore and from the great flotillas of all sorts of craft on the water have significantly given to the returning heroes some idea of the esteem and admiration in which they are held by the people.

Long before sunrise the guns were fired at Castle William, Governor's Island, and the people were soon astir. Crowds were soon hurrying to the river to be early on the scene.

The New York and New Jersey shores were crowded with people. The river and bay were literally alive with craft and the craft alive with people, all cheering and good-natured.

An impressive scene was when the flags were hoisted on the forts and the flagships. As the stately banners were raised aloft the bands of the forts and on the flagships played "The Star Spangled Banner" and the shores rang with patriotic cheers.

There was very little friction in carrying out the program and no more delay than could be expected. The citizens' committee left the foot of Cortlandt street on the steamer Glen Isle and proceeded down the bay, followed by a long retinue of all sorts and description of craft.

At Tompkinsville the mayor and committee of ten embarked and boarded the police boat Patrol. The Patrol then headed for the flagship with colors flying and bands playing.

The Staten Island shores were literally lined with people and they joined in a general acclamation with the people on myriads of boats.

The welcoming ceremonies were short but impressive. The ceremonies over, amid the hoarse shrieking of steam whistles and the hosannas of throngs on the shore and water, the mayor and committee returned to the Glen Island.

Then came the event of the day. There followed considerable wiggling on gray battleships and police boats formed in line. Then came the Glen Island and then the battleships began slowly to move up the bay. There was a salvo of cannons and the cheers of the people and the toots of thousands of whistles made an indelible din.

Soon the monster pageant was in line. As Governor's Island was passed there was a tremendous report from the guns that did so much execution at Santiago and Guantanamo. The people on shore and afloat went wild.

And so it was all way up to Grant's tomb, where there was a fine demonstration of patriotic fervor, such as New York never witnessed before. The pageant was viewed and cheered by hundreds of thousands of people. It was a magnificent and indescribable scene and one never to be forgotten.

Mr. Hugins of the Indian Territory, was killed by jumping from an upper hotel window.

Only two of the other bodies have been identified, the names being Abe Mathews, of Greenville, Miss., and W. H. Wells, residence unknown. A number of persons were injured by jumping from hotel windows.

A cottage belonging to Colonel O'Brien and the Kentucky livery stable were burned. The loss is $75,000. The fire started at 2 p. m. in the National hotel.

SEÑOR SILVEA'S JAW-BONE.

Insists That American Capture of Manila Does Not Affect Spanish Sovereignty in Rest of Philippines.

Madrid, Aug. 20.—Señor Silvea, now the virtual leader of the conservatives, expresses the view of that party on the capture of Manila in the following statement:

"The capture of Manila in no wise affects the rest of the archipelago; and the cortes should be summoned with urgency in order to prevent the world from gaining the impression that Spain has lost her sovereignty in the Philippines. The Liberal party should consider peace, but the Sagasta cabinet cannot affect the task."

If the queen regent tenders him her invitation, Señor Silvea is disposed to accept the office of premier.

REBELLIOUS INDIANS IN MEXICO.

Serious Trouble with Indians in Yucatan Peninsula—Government Will Use Vigorous Means to Bring Rebels Under Control.

Merida, Yucatan, Mexico, Aug. 20.—The news from the southern part of the peninsula is that the rebel Indians are taking extraordinary measures to prevent information regarding their conditions and state of military preparations from reaching the whites. Any indiscreet disclosure of betraying the tribal secrets is promptly condemned.

Several engineers, who tried to penetrate the wilderness where the Indians are most numerous, have never returned. Among them were a number of Chinese traders and Turkish merchants.

The Indians trade actively with the English colonists of Belize, but give them no information regarding their numbers and military strength. Felipe Ake, who was their chief, recently had to flee for his life with his family, the Indians having become suspicious of his wishing to make peace.

It is probable that the government will undertake a vigorous campaign to bring the rebels under control.

REWARD OF HEROISM

Graphic Account of the Reception That Was Accorded the "Rough Riders" in New York.

STRONG MEN SHED TEARS

New Mexicans, with Their Shrapnel-Torn Silk Banner, Little More Than Shreds of Silk, Conspicuously Honored.

The welcome given the "Rough Riders" and their colonel, when they landed at Montauk Point last Sunday, was worthy of their deeds at Santiago, and is described by the New York Journal as follows:

There were not women enough to lend the scene of debarkation the picturesque and emotional features that the occasion would have warranted, but tears trickled down the bronzed cheeks of bearded men and gruff voices raised in welcoming cheers became husky and broke into sobs as comrade embraced comrade in disregard of the rigid regulations of the quarantine and the double picket guard set to enforce them.

News had got about camp early in the day that the "Rough Riders" would be landed at the lower railway pier about 11 o'clock. The rumor was confirmed when Captain Edwards, of the 1st cavalry, threw a double line of dusky troopers from the 9th cavalry all about the pier and its approaches.

To keep back the crush of the crowds Captain Edwards had to send for an extra detachment of guards. "Rough Riders" from the Tampa detachment had begged the privilege of acting as the reception guard to their comrades, and it was accorded them.

On the end of an empty express car, Mrs. John A. Logan, Mrs. John A. Logan, Jr., Miss Babcock and Mrs. Downes, wife of Colonel Downes, of the 71st New York, were placed in posts of vantage, surrounded by gallant gold-laced officers of cavalry. Below, all around, crowded and packed, were "Rough Riders" and 3d cavalry troops.

At 10:45 the big transport Miami, "No. 1," by the immense white numeral on the stern, got up her anchor and steamed cautiously in toward the dock.

In a moment or so it became apparent that the fine passenger ship had been decked over with a rough roof of pine boards, and that a lowering superstructure had been extemporized of the same rough material.

Mrs. Logan waved her handkerchief frantically, and so did the other ladies. "Oh, I must see General Wheeler," said Mrs. Logan. "He has just left my boy Jack and can tell me all about him."

The first man over the rail of the transport was Dr. Magruder, the quarantine inspection officer, who had boarded the Miami and disinfected her.

The first man to step down the gangway was General Wheeler. Directly behind him came Colonel Roosevelt, General Jose's 70 years set very lightly upon his silvered head yesterday. The old cavalry leader was slightly dressed. His blue fadigue jacket fitted his slender, little figure like a glove, his riding boots gleamed below close-cut breeches of the dandiest cavalry style. His white beard and white helmet accentuated the mahogany brown of his complexion.

The old general trotted down the gangplank with the agility of his cadet days, and seized Captain Edwards by the hand. Colonel Roosevelt, heavier, dressed in the brown duck and bright yellow facing of his corps, came down the plank more sedately, beaming through his glasses beneath the shade of a broad sombrero. He shook hands with Captain Edwards, too, and then, turning, was clasped in a regular way by General Young, commander of the camp, who had just arrived. General Wheeler, too, came in for a warm embrace from General Young.

It was more affecting than as if a woman had been a party to the salutation. Behind General Wheeler and Colonel Roosevelt came the gentlemen of their staffs. Navy officers from the cruisers and transports came ashore in cutters and participated in the general hand shake.

Behind the staff came the band of the 3d cavalry, which, with Troops F and C of that regiment, came on the Miami. The bandsmen, ragged, bearded, bronzed, unslinging their battered instruments and took a position on the dock. Clearly the cavalry intended to land with the usual jaunty ceremony of that arm of the service.

A General Wheeler and Colonel Roosevelt moved down the dock with their officers following, the band blazed out the introductory bass of "Rally Round the Flag," and the cheers that had gone before were eclipsed by a roar that made the sound waves crinkle.

Another followed as the colors of the 3d cavalry came into sight. Troop F led, at its head that gallant Captain Dodd, who wounded nearly to death in the hornets' nest at Bloody Bend, tried to crawl out of the hospital to rejoin his troop.

"Three cheers for General Jose Wheeler and the heroes of Santiago," came a shout from a car roof. Even Mrs. Logan joined in that cheer.

"Three cheers for Captain Brown," came next, and a slender, pale man in the black uniform of an officer, bowed gravely, but smilingly, at the recognition.

The band swung into "Auld Lang Syne" as a standard—crimson, white and blue shreds of shrapnel-torn silk, supported on either side by a gaudy gaudion, came down the dock. It was the flag presented to the "Rough Riders" by the ladies of New Mexico—the flag that was hoisted over that block house at Siboney, of which our men had made a chancel house. Beneath its folds walked proudly Major Horsey, of the "Rough Riders." Behind it came 30 men—all that Spanish bullets and Cuban fevers had left serviceable out of the 100 brave lads who went into the fight beneath the gaudion of Company C.

"Say, 'Hub,' where did you get the Galways?" yelled one Montana man to another. "Hub," pale weak, leaning on a comrade's arm, grinned and pointed to a Spanish sabre which he carried by way of reply.

Troop E, Captain Muller, followed Troop C beneath the colors which the New Mexicans prize above life itself. Meantime Colonel Roosevelt was warmly greeting his brother-in-law, Mr. Cowles, and Douglas Robinson, of the Red Cross Society. Troop B came by headed by Lieutenants Wilcox and Remington. The troops' gallant commander, Captain McClintock, lies in a New York hospital severely wounded.

"Not over half of them there," sobbed a tall rider frankly, wiping away his tears. Ahead of troop F marched jaunty Captain Maximiliano Luna, the "smartest" officer in the regiment; Luna of New Mexico. Luna at once dandy, border fighter and hero. He had a fine Panama hat, a Spanish officer's once drawn rakishly over his handsome eyes. Close behind him marched a tall man who carried a Spanish Mauser beside his carbine.

"That's Sinnett," growled a tank rider. "He was left with the Tampa detail, deserted, beat his way to Santiago on a transport and joined his troop. Wish I'd done it."

Lieutenant Greenway led G troop down the dock. "Greenway of Yale," he used to be, mighty player on the Varsity football team. Behind him came a sick soldier, who wore instead of a cant a jersey with the flaming colors of Princeton.

"Charley Hokey" commented the tall rider, jocosely. "He was the first man we put in the guard house. It was at San Antonio. Hokey stole a Mexican dog for a mascot."

Lieutenant Woodbury Kane led K troop in place of Captain Hunter, who is ill at Santiago. A bowl of welcome greeted the silk gaudion of the troop, which was presented to it by a San Antonio society woman with the adjuration: "This isn't a dress parade gaudion. I want you to carry it into battle."

Last of the gallant band of "Rough Riders" came Troop L. Strong men sobbed aloud as its decimated ranks filed slowly by, for gallant Allyn Capron was captain of Troop L and "Ham" Fish was its 1st sergeant.

"Both dead and Lieutenant Thomas still laid up with a bad wound," groaned the tall rider. "They were the boys that led the way into the muck of it, and they caught it worst."

The band followed the last troop of riders and then General Wheeler and Colonel Roosevelt, who had been talking across the picket line with Mrs. Logan, mounted their horses and so did the members of the staff and the officers of General Young's escort. While the command was forming, Colonel Roosevelt sitting upon his horse, greeted the newspaper men cordially.

Two members of the "Rough Riders" walked painfully along the dock to where their troop, Troop A, was standing. They were so weak they had to sit down. After the regiment got in motion they tried to follow, but got no more than 100 yards when they got to drop out and fall in the shed of a stable belonging to the railroad company. Private Van Sicken, of the same troop, was detailed to help them until the arrival of the ambulance.

Mrs. Logan, Miss Babcock and Mrs. Downes rode in their hackboard in the rear of the regiment. They saw the two "Rough Riders" drop out of the line. Mrs. Downes stopped the rig, and the three climbed down. Mrs. Downes carried a basket of fruit, the best that the New York market provided. The three women knelt down by the side of the rough-bearded men, and with her own hand Mrs. Downes forced grapes between their lips. The men were George M. Carter and William Whalen, of Prescott, A. T., both members of the famous "Ruck" O'Neill's troop.

"Poor brave soldiers," said Mrs. Logan, sympathetically; "you have served your country nobly, and you will receive a warm welcome from the American people. You will get the best of care when you get to the hospital."

Someone introduced the white-haired woman as the widow of General Logan. The men evinced an eager interest in her then, and Mr. McCarter held out his hand to her again.

"Are you General Logan's wife," he said. "You, surely are the friend of the sick soldiers."

Some one offered to get the men a drink of water. Miss Babcock remarked in an undertone to Captain Gilfoyle, who stood by her, "Can't you get them a little whiskey?" "I don't think there is a drop near here," said Captain Gilfoyle.

"If you can get any they can have one drink only," said Mrs. Logan. The women rode to the restaurant at the station and bought a lot of sandwiches for the troopers.

WHITE OAKS HAPPENINGS.

School Matters in Lincoln County—Fruit and Vegetables Injured by Hail—Gadet Appointed to New Mexico Military Institute.

White Oaks, Aug. 17.—This hamlet is rejoicing, in its quiet and unobtrusive way, over the signing of the protocol and the cessation of hostilities. The business outlook, through all avenues, continues to brighten.

The teachers' normal institute of Lincoln county began a two weeks' session Monday, with Miss Elizabeth Austin and Miss May Gilmore as instructors. The attendance promises to be extremely satisfactory in spite of the long distances to be traveled and the expense of tuition and board, which is away out of proportion to the salaries paid to teachers.

White Oaks is entirely exempt from any smallpox, indeed there has not been an epidemic, much less a contagious disease in the place for more than a twelve month. The extreme healthfulness of the locality makes it safe for a convention of any kind at all times, to meet here.

The school trustees have elected Miss Elizabeth Austin and Miss Ula Gilmore to teach the White Oaks public school the coming year. Miss Austin is a successful and experienced teacher, having been employed for several years in the public schools of Kansas City, Mo.

Spencer, the 4-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Parker, of this place, died Monday afternoon, August 15, of spinal meningitis. His illness was brief, but most painful. The little fellow was unusually bright and winning in manner, and was greatly endeared to all friends and relatives. His death is a sad bereavement to the parents as it is also to the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Parker and Dr. and Mrs. A. G. Lane.

Mrs. F. H. Lang, daughter of Captain and Mrs. Timoney, of Roswell, is visiting her brother, Bert Timoney, of this place.

Quite a party of White Oaks denizens are taking their summer outing up in the Capitan mountains, where the wild raspberries grow in abundance. These wild berries grow very large and fine and have a finer flavor than any of the cultivated varieties. The party has been out but a week and send in the report that they have canned more than 100 quarts.

Geo. Kimball, Jr., of Picoche, is the cadet chosen by the Lincoln county commissioners to represent the county, or rather to receive the benefits of a scholarship, in the New Mexico Military Institute at Roswell. The appointment was made very easily and as there was but the one applicant for the place there was no need of an examination. Were the position still vacant there would be a half dozen or more applicants.

S. M. Wiener, Jr., of the firm of Wiener & Son, large and exclusive dry goods merchants, has gone east to purchase a fall stock of goods.

The Tallafero Mercantile & Trading Company is handling the fruit from the Coglin ranch and the Coglin Bros. handle that from the Barber ranch. None finer can be produced anywhere.

Juvenile birthday parties and afternoons devoted to the entertainment of the grownups do not abate here on account of the dog-days as they must needs do in most places. A feature worthy of note was a flower piece arranged by school children in the New Mexico Military Institute at Roswell. The arrangement was made very early and as there was but the one applicant for the place there was no need of an examination. Were the position still vacant there would be a half dozen or more applicants.

The Old Abe mine still continues to offer the greatest encouragement to its owners. Down below the 900-foot level a vein of ore has been struck that assays $100 to the ton. The company has begun putting up a cyanide plant and will soon have it in operation. Wm. Watson, one of the mine owners, will superintend the plant. Three of the large tanks are already in place. The mine employees have converted them into swimming and bathing tanks, for the present, in which capacity they afford most luxurious pleasure.
